MYSTERY IN PAINTER'S DEATH
Wood Alcohol Poisoning Cause, Thinks Physician
(Special Correspondence)
HONO, Aug. 1.—During the past week Deputy Sheriff Pether has been looking into the matter of the death of James Pauloa, a painter, who died at Pepeekeo as a result of wood alcohol poisoning.
Pauloa was working for Harris, the master painter, at Pepeekeo, and it appears that he wanted a bit of liquor for a Saturday night recreation. As far as the police have been able to find out, he went for some wine through some Chinese, and this he drank, as well as some Scotch whiskey, which was brought to the house by a couple of Scotchmen. While both Pauloa and his wife drank of the wine, Pauloa drank most of it, and as the Scotchmen stuck to the product of their home soil and as they did not suffer any after effects, it appears that the wine was the cause of the trouble, especially as Mrs. Pauloa is positive that between the time when her husband drank the wine and the following Monday, when he was taken ill, he did not drink any other liquor.
In the meantime Dr. Irwin, who handled the case, declares that the symptoms indicated strongly that the man was suffering from wood alcohol poisoning. He became blind and suffered acutely before he died on the following Thursday.
The fact that it is a fairly common thing for painters, who have to use wood alcohol in their work, become addicted to the use of the drug in moderate quantities, as well as the fact that it is not plausible that anyone should adulterate cheap wine with wood alcohol, as the latter is more expensive than the wine, leads many who are familiar with the facts of the case to believe that Pauloa got hold of the wood alcohol in some manner and drank it without his wife having any knowledge of it.
On the other hand, Mr. Harris states that there was no wood alcohol among the supplies at hand for the Pepeekeo job, as it was not required for the kind of work which was being done. Pauloa was known to be a steady workman. He drank occasionally, but he had never let drink interfere with his work. He leaves a widow.
MASON TO TELL OF BUYING SENATE SEATS
Chicago, July 20.—Since former Senator William E. Mason of Illinois declared that 50 per cent of the Senate seats were bought he is being showered with requests to visit various States and point out to the voters some facts that will back up his words. Mr. Mason says he may make the tour. In the meantime he has given out an explanation of his first statement. "Do United States Senators represent humanity or cash?" I say respectfully that they represent the power that makes them Senators. It is the exception when a poor man breaks into the Senate," he said. "Fifty per cent are bought," continued Mr. Mason, "although I do not mean to say that the purchases are made outright, as is alleged to be the case of one Illinois Senator. Money is spent by interested persons to create sentiment for or against a candidate. It amounts to the same thing. Money puts them in Washington, and it's a rare senator who does not represent the power that puts him there."
